WHO LET THE DOGS OUT?

500 dog bites reported at general hospital as Corp to sterilise 5,000 dogs

NGO launches anti-rabies drive

SHANU MOHAN | DC
THIRUVANANTHAPURAM, SEPT. 13

Despite carrying out Animal Birth Control (ABC) programmes, the City Corporation is unable to bring down the rising dog population in the city. There is no respite in the number of dog bite cases too. It is learnt that an average of 500 dog bite cases are being reported at Thiruvananthapuram General Hospital. It's been four years since the civic body launched the dog census to find out their population in the city to chalk out a plan to bring down the number of stray dogs. Lack of adequate infrastructure for carrying out sterilisation drive is one of the reasons for rise in dog population in the state.

An official in the civic body said that as part of the ABC programme, the civic body is planning to sterilise around 5,000 dogs this year. "Our actual target was 2,500 dogs, but we are very much ahead and would be able to sterilise 5,000 dogs by the end of this year. But we have to cover around 100 wards and we should be able to sterilise at least 10,000 dogs this year to bring down the stray dog population in five to six years," said the official. The official said that setting up more ABC centres is the only way to control the population. There are around 15 veterinary hospitals under the civic body but none of them have adequate facilities for undertaking the programme.

As part of its effort to create awareness about prevention of rabies, FIAP — the Federation of Indian Animal Protection Organisations — an NGO based in Delhi has launched Rabies Free India campaign in the state capital. In connection with the campaign, FIAP launched extensive awareness for school students, dog bite victims in the state capital. Currently, we have two centres doing the sterilisation drive, one at Pettah and the other one at Thrivuvanam. due to a local protest at Pettah, we are using the Thrivuvanam veterinary hospital as our main centre for the drive," said the official.

Anushka Manchanda supports FIAP’s 21-Day-Vegan challenge

New Delhi: As per research by the Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) of the United Nations, animal agriculture is responsible for 16% of greenhouse gas emissions and contributes additional complications to climate change. Also, it is the single largest anthropogenic source of food. Approximately 76% of the world’s agricultural lands are dedicated to raising animals for food, including grazing and food production.

Environmental challenges, including climate change, and the growing threat of disease transmission to and from agricultural animals and other threats to sustainably meeting the demand for animal agriculture. The current level of industrialization of animal farming thus presents dire consequences to the world’s most pressing problems.

Shifting away from unsustainable food systems is imperative to begin to secure the future of humans, animals, and the planet.

A substantial portion of the human population explicitly supports the fact that animal welfare requires looking beyond just slaughter and how animals are treated. Being vegan is not just easier now, but even aspirational with many prominent vegan celebs openly endorsing a green diet for a sustainable future. Many celebrities are also out to support a green diet and bring up the environmental, ethical, and health benefits of a plant-based diet.

Recently, Anushka Manchanda - musician, actor, artist, and a fervently outspoken vegan, collated with the Federation of Indian Animal Protection Organizations (FIAP) for their #CompassionChallenge to encourage people to try a vegan diet for 21 days. Along with posting regularly on her social media handles, Anushka also showed up for marches and rallies when it comes to speaking up for the animals and the environment. Anushka, who was a freshtake before turning vegan dubs, ‘Yes not about being perfect or shading people who need vegan. I am about realizing that our planet is dying and there is no planet B. Ethically, I made the switch when I realized I love animals too much to be blessed by false marketing of animal products. I am an ethical vegan and strongly want to push the vegan movement forward in India’.

FIAP Executive Director, Mr. Yesh Shethra, said, “In the last decade there has been a tremendous shift in how vegans are perceived in India. With the growing increase in awareness on the prevalence of animal cruelty in the food industry and knowing that raising animals for food is the greatest human-caused source of environmental destruction, many international celebrities are now endorsing vegan brands and campaigns, which in turn has led to a surge in interest from the public as well.”

The collaboration with Anushka Manchanda aims to bring awareness to the public about the benefits of a vegan diet and encourage more people to adopt this lifestyle. The #CompassionChallenge is designed to encourage people to try a vegan diet for 21 days and see the positive impact it has on their health, the environment, and the animals.”

In the city for an anti-rabies campaign, she called for teaching children what behaviour to adopt to avoid getting bitten. The organization has also started this education drive in in various local schools. She said: “Dogs bite us mainly due to our lack of awareness.
